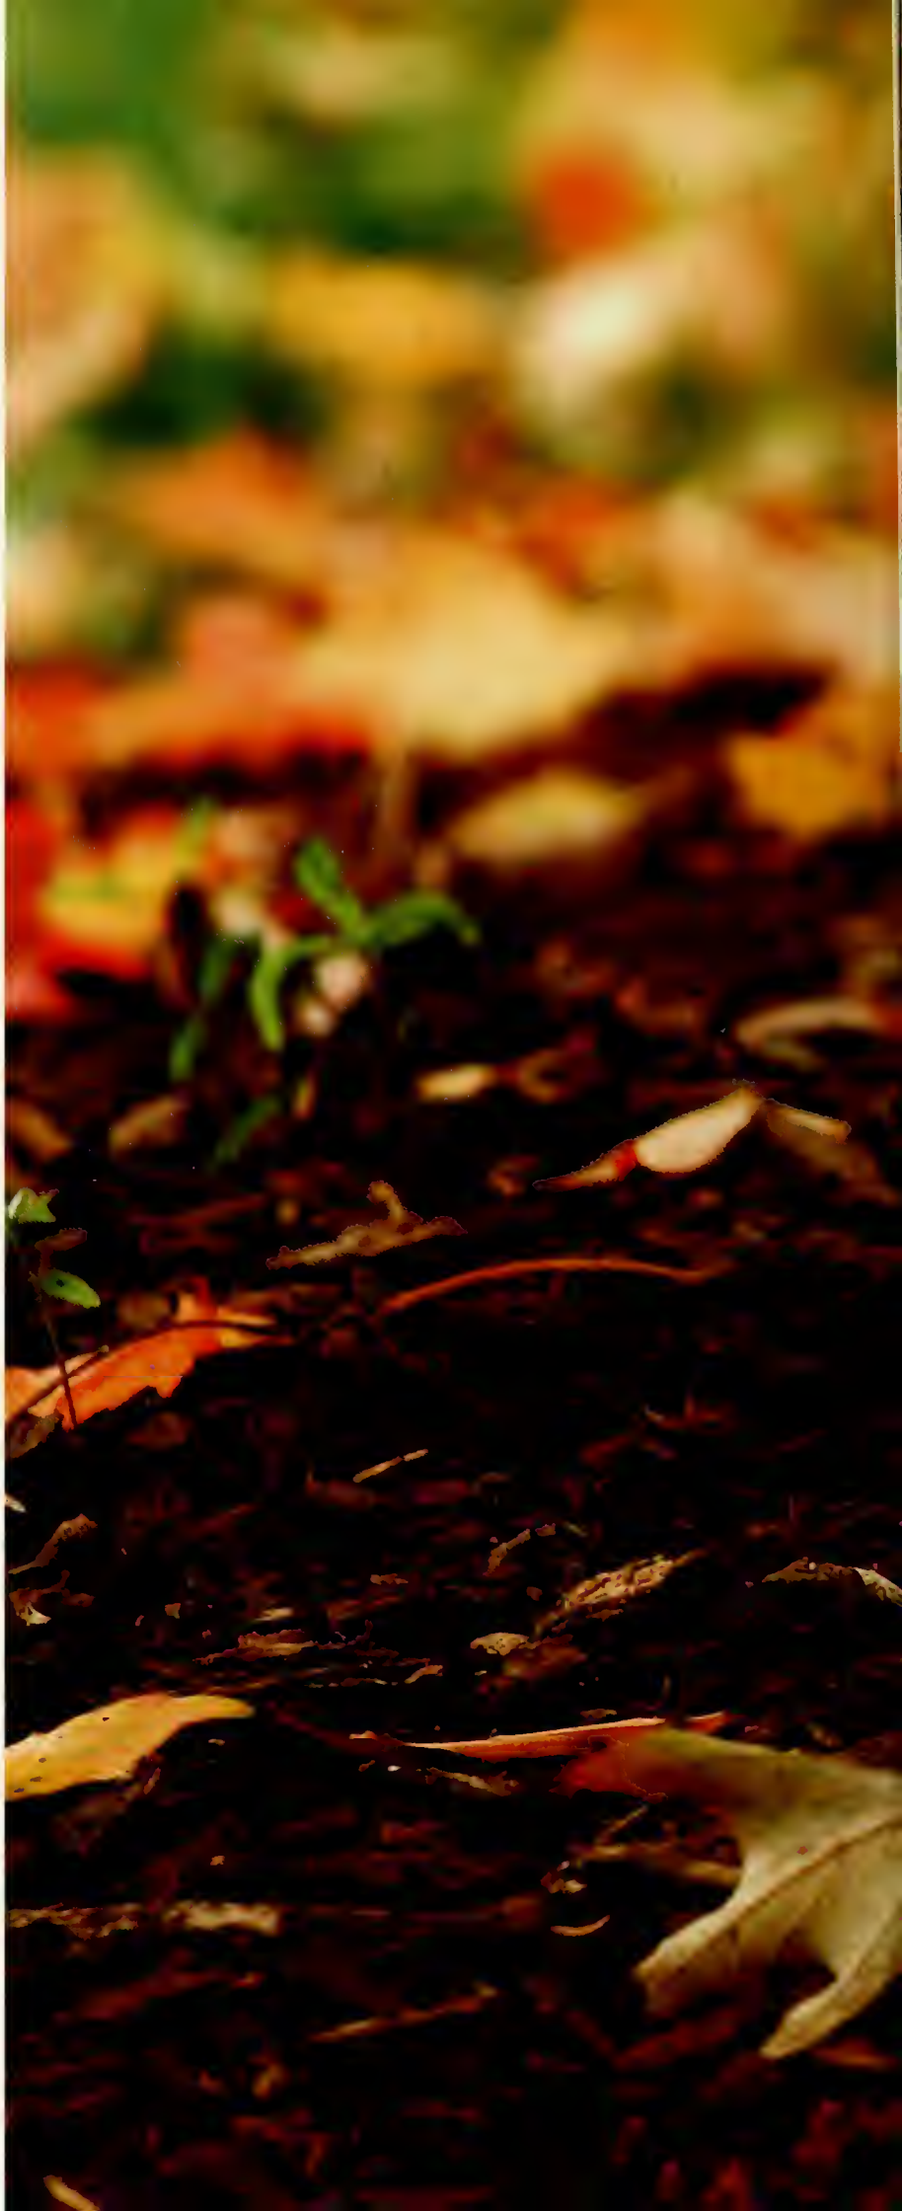
Prologue

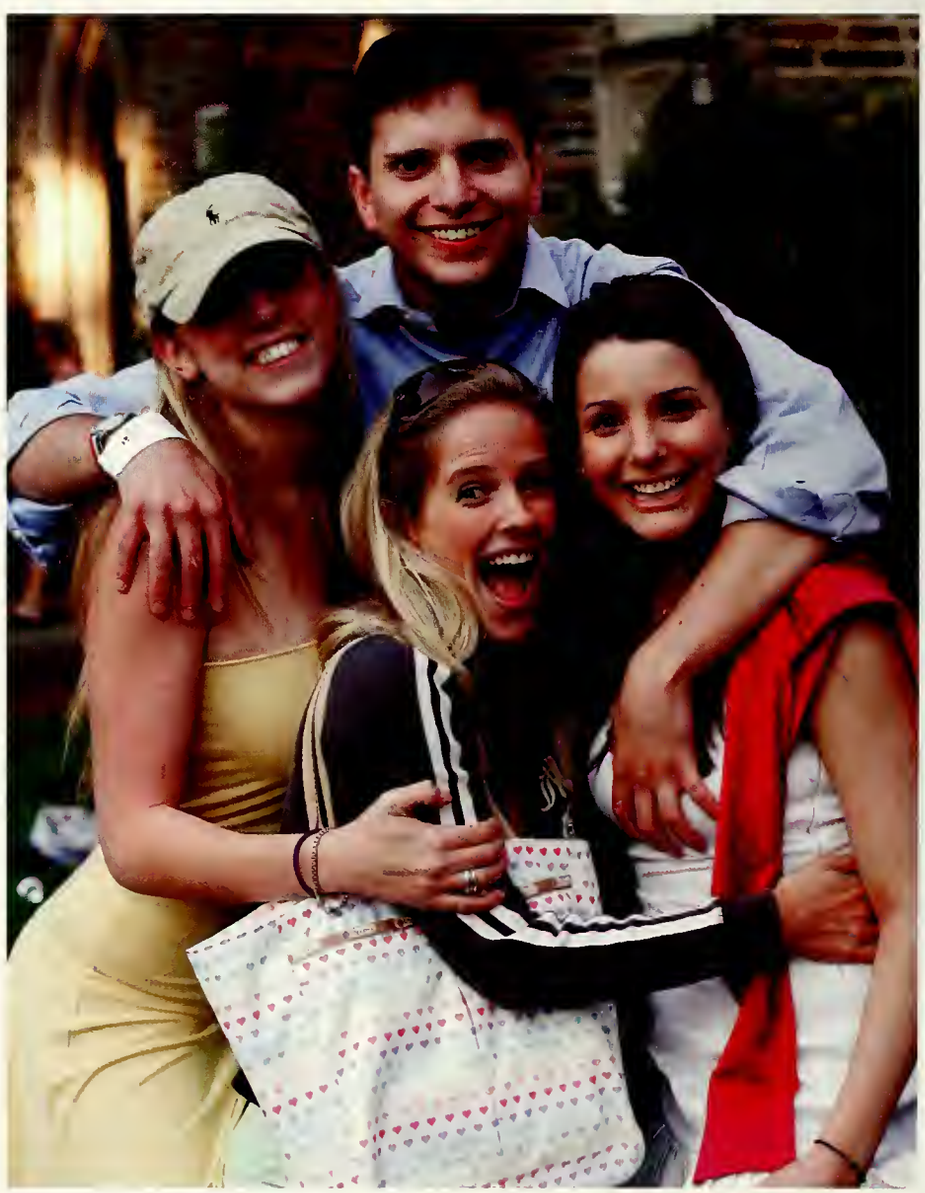
It's hot and humid in Durham as summer ends and students get settled into the Gothic Wonderland. Soon classes and studying fill the weekdays and parties fill the weekends as life at Duke returns where it left off the spring before. While the first few weeks of school are a mix of excitement and uncertainty for all, soon the leaves begin to change colors and the temperatures cool as fall approaches and another year at Duke University gets into full swing.

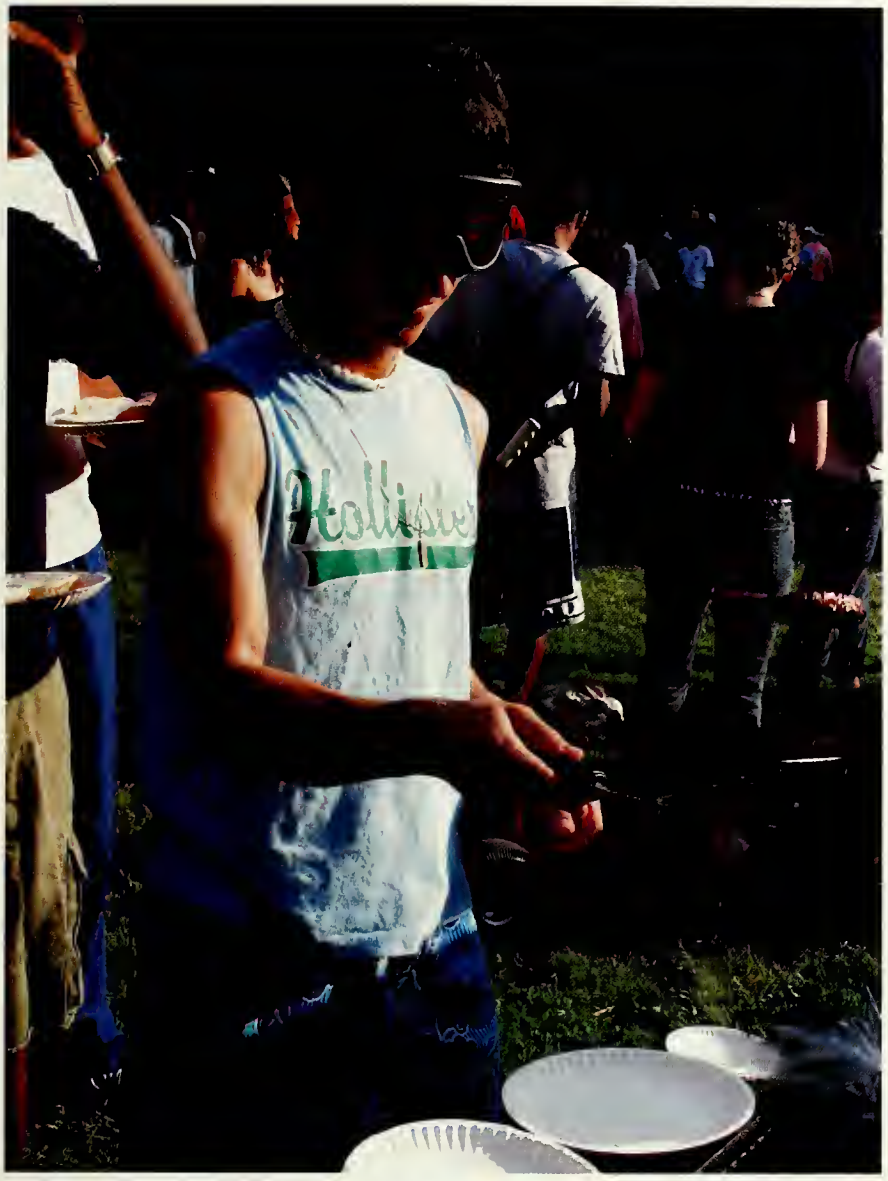


Heineken
IN HOLLAND

Before classes even resume, the parties begin. While social life on campus isn't as wild as it once was, students still find ample opportunities every weekend (and weekday) to enjoy themselves. With the university's crackdown on on-campus underage drinking, a new trend hit Duke this year as more students than ever made the trek off campus to party at bars, clubs and off-campus fraternity houses.

There's nothing like a barbeque to cap off a week of class on a sunny Friday afternoon. Be it Few, Kilgo, or Central, Dukies never hesitate to take advantage of good weather.



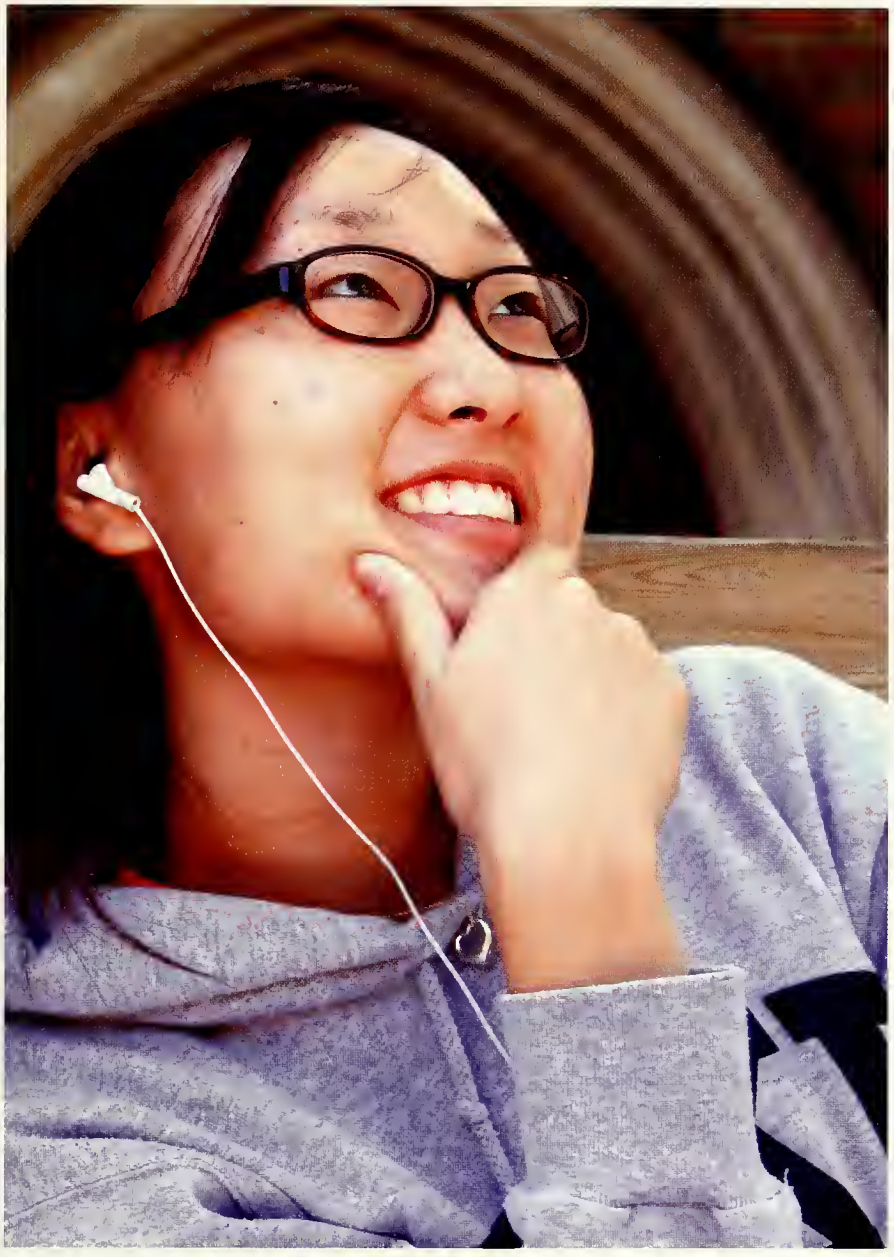


JAM

Not even the new large screen TV's in Wilson Gym could draw students away from being outside on a nice afternoon. Duke Students enjoy a myriad of physical activities from karate to jogging to basketball to even handball.

On September 18, in the Duke Chapel, Richard H. Brodhead was inaugurated as the 9th President of Duke University. The inaugural week was filled with concerts, academic panels, a massive party in Cameron Indoor Stadium and a stirring address from Nobel Laureate Wole Soyinka. Taking over for Nan Keohane gave President Brodhead some big shoes to fill but he immediately charmed students and faculty alike with his dry sense of humor and affinity for dancing.

MENU



Duke made national news over the summer by announcing that it would spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to provide each incoming freshman with their own 20 gigabyte IPod. The mp3 player soon became a staple studying and fashion accessory for all students on campus. While the University's stated of goal of integrating the IPod into the classroom may not have been as successful as administrators had hoped, the 1,600 new IPods certainly made for some very happy underclassmen.

Even after eliminating all 8:00 am classes this year, students still had trouble staying awake during the day as the administration added more morning, evening and Friday classes in an effort to better balance out the week.

Campaign fever swept the campus in the Fall as students got heavily involved in the November Presidential Election. While the nation eagerly watched the incumbent George W. Bush beat out John Kerry for the presidency, Duke got political in panel discussions, debates, and dorm rooms leading up to election night.

No issue affects Duke Students like the pressing topic of sexual assault does. During Sexual Assault Awareness Week, male and female students alike work hard to raise awareness of sexual assault on campus. Events like 'Take Back Night' are annual attempt to make sexual assault at Duke as uncommon of an occurrence as possible.

Dukie's have many favorite study breaks. Be it TV, Texas Hold'em, Cosmic runs or video games, every student has his or her own preferred form of procrastination.

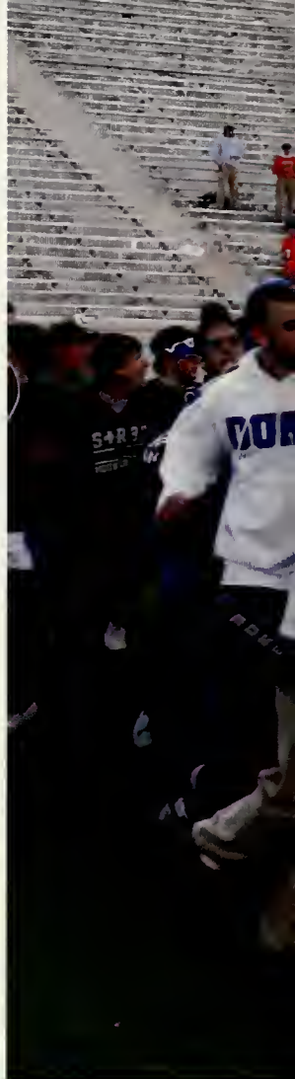
With a third National Championship in Women's Golf, five additional top 5 and eleven overall top 10 finishes in 2004-2005, Duke maintained its reputation as a university powerhouse on and off the field.

Fans wasted no time to celebrate Duke's first and only ACC win all season as the Blue Devils beat Clemson 16-13 with a last second field goal by senior Matt Brooks. After a standoff with campus police, fans managed to tear down one of Wallace Wade's goalposts and parade it all the way to the Chapel Quad.



No sports fans are like the Camero Crazies who camp outside of Camero Indoor Stadium for up to six weeks jus to see their Blue Devils dominate an AC foe. Over the past twenty years, ten ing for the Carolina Game has become staple of every student's spring semes ter as they live, work and party in th tents that make up the legendary K-Ville

On the night of February 7th, Duke's main quad went up in smoke as students burned benches, furniture and anything else they could find to celebrate the men's basketball nail-biting 71-70 win over arch-rival North Carolina. The bon-fire was one of the largest in Duke History and prompted fire officials to put it after just an hour to the protest of many revelers.

With four theatre groups, three comedy troupes and numerous professional productions such as the premier of the Broadway musical Little Woman, the stage plays an important role in the Duke experience. On any given weekend a student can catch a musical put on by Hoof n' Horn, a dance show by DefMo or even improv from DUI.

Be it Wednesday Night Jazz at the May-Lou Williams Center, a huge concert with world famous artists like Ben Folds and Sister Hazel, or even a taste of the local music scene at the newly reopened Coffeehouse, Dukie's were not deprived of opportunities to indulge their musical interests this year.

ARTS + CULTURES + TECHNOLOGY
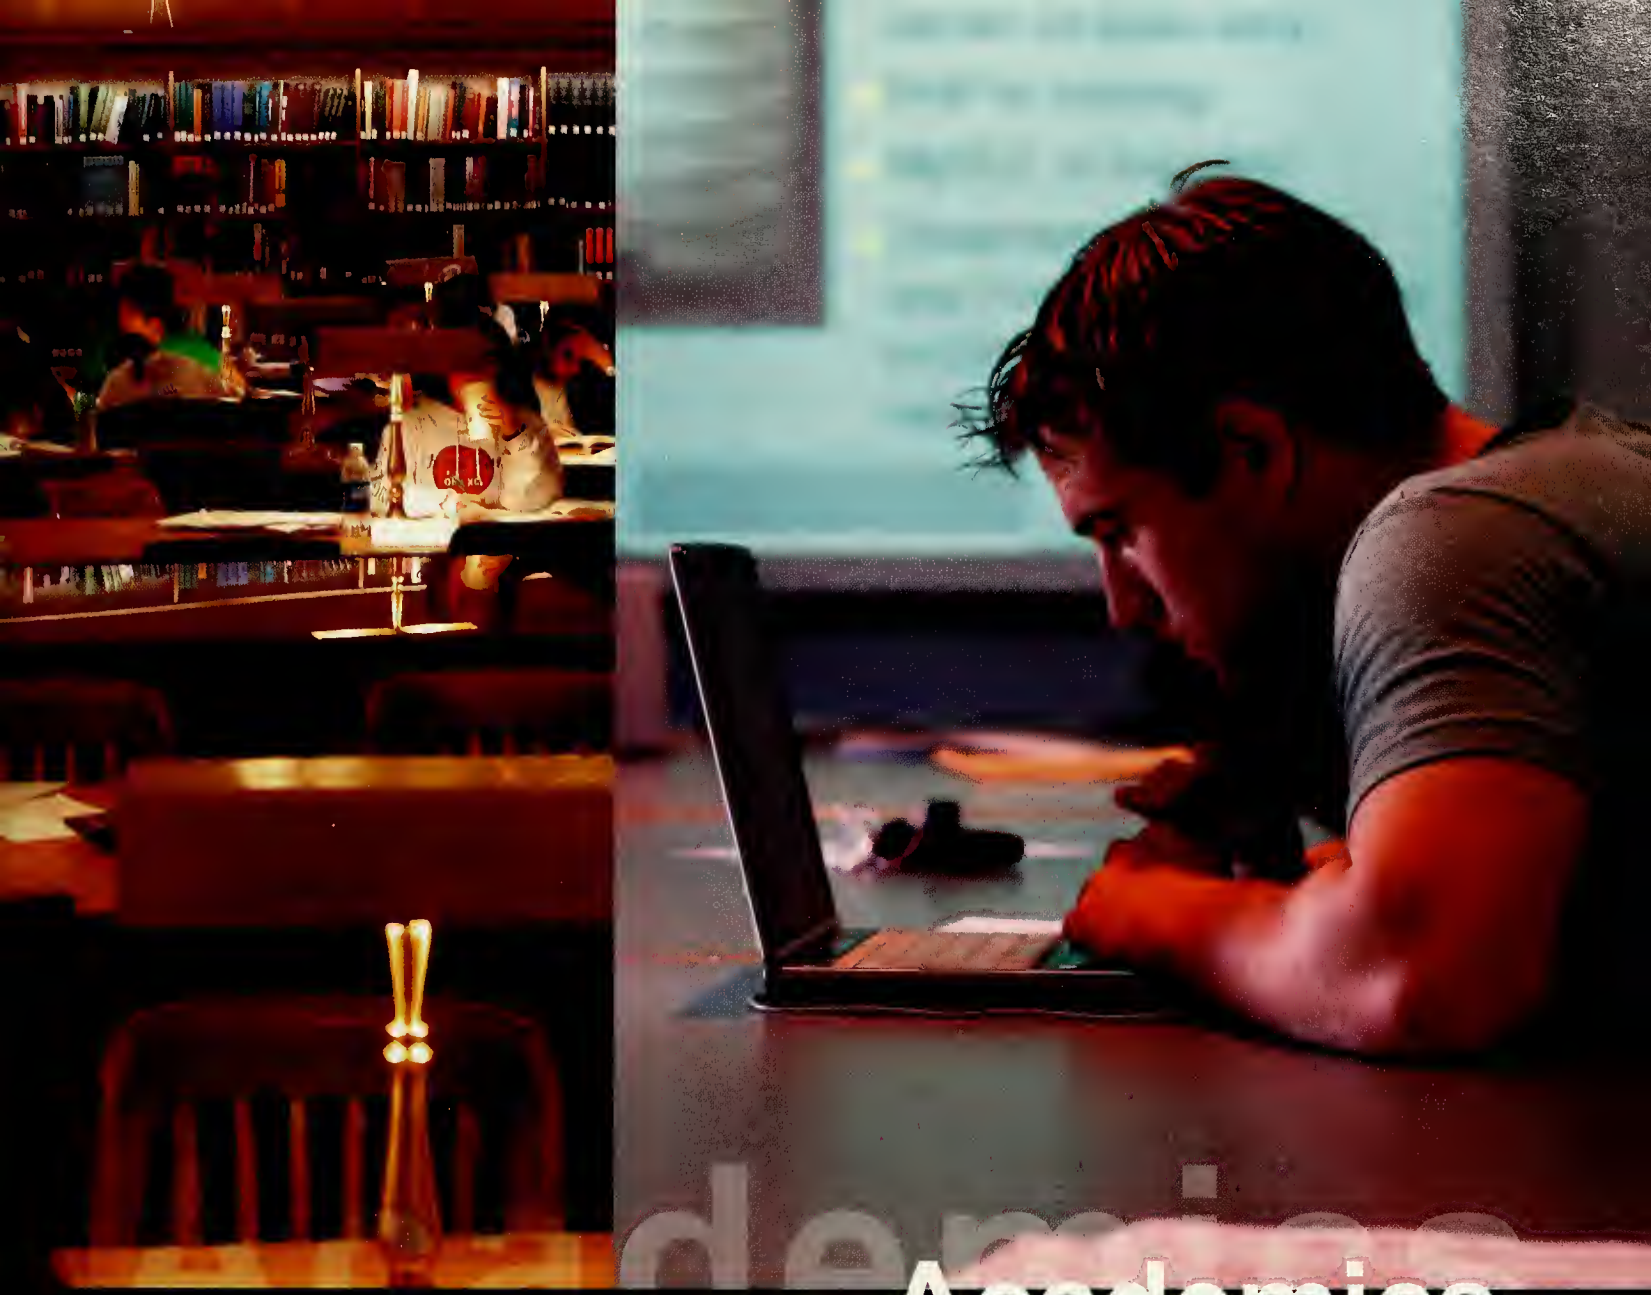
the space

With Duke's largest ever student curated art exhibit, "Road in Sight" taking place all around campus, art was everywhere from the newly opened tobacco warehouse gallery, 'The Space,' to even the buses. Students found a myriad of artistic avenues to express themselves like the Arts Collaborative nights at the Coffeehouse and in many of the new art course offerings.



Academics

As one of the world's premier institutions of higher learning, Duke Students take their studies seriously. With over 30 different majors and classes ranging from Organic Chemistry to Global Hip-Hop, students have a huge variety of academic options. There are always those perennial favorite courses though like Intro to Jazz and Massage Therapy that fill up in mere seconds. Whatever their academic interest, it's a safe bet that no undergrad leaves Duke unchallenged or dissatisfied with their time in the classroom.

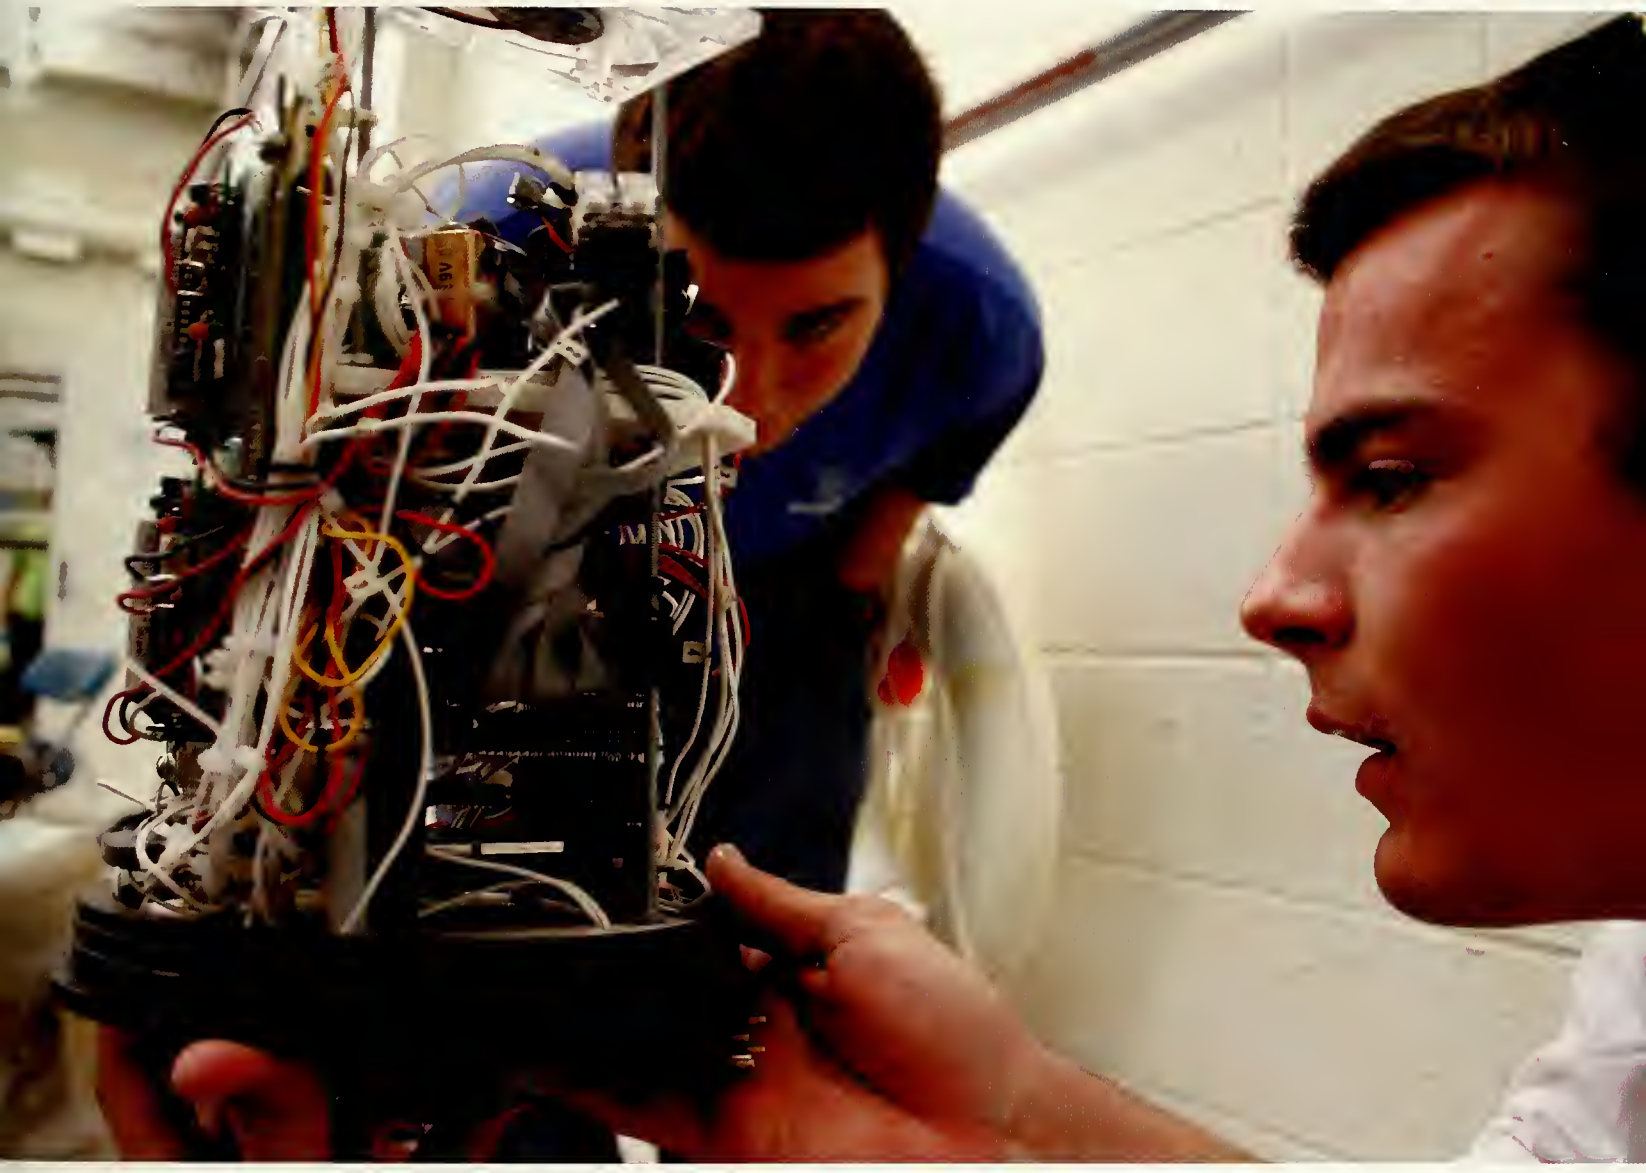
FROS-LIFE



When it comes to hitting the books, no one studies harder than a Blue Devil. Whether it be in K-Ville, the gardens or the library, Duke students work just as hard as they play.

Hot and Steamy

This year, almost 600 students studied abroad. While most who went were juniors, a good number of sophomores and seniors also took the opportunity to study in a foreign country. Although it's always difficult to adjust back to life at Duke after being abroad, everyone comes back with a fresh outlook on their studies and life in general.

ben folds

sponsored by Duke University Union

Playing to a packed Page auditorium which sold-out in minutes, Triangle native Ben Folds thrilled Duke with his brand of catchy alternative piano rock. With a rocking performance, Folds played an eclectic mix drawing from his solo catalogue of albums Rockin' the Suburbs and his highly acclaimed 2005 release Songs of Silverman plus hits from his days as the front man for Ben Fold's Five. As an encore, the piano man hilariously covered the hip hop hit "Bitches ain't Shit" to wild reception which followed an earlier rousing cover of Modest Mouse's "Float On" by Aussie opener Ben Lee.

Acclaimed author David Eggers is best known for his autobiographical book A Heartbreaking Work of Staggering Genius, but he's more than just a writer. Eggers is also the founder of a publishing company, a volunteer, and a succesful retailer of pirate merchandise. Eggers' Parent's Weekend talk included a reading from his newest work, You Shall Know Our Velocity and dares from the audience which resulted in him throwing a frisbee to the top level of Page. He also discussed his volunteer organization, 826 Valencia, which helps elementary and high school students develop their writing skills. After leasing a building in San Francisco to use as the center of his volunteer organization, Eggers discovered that the owner required he sell something. It didn't take long for Eggers to decide that he was going to sell pirate merchandise. "I don't know if it's a comment on San Francisco or what, but this place does really well," he told the audience.

"Everything David says is a lie." That's how David Sedaris' younger brother, Paul, responded to Sedaris' October talk during parent's weekend. While David Sedaris may stretch the truth occasionally, his stories had the sold-out Page Auditorium audience in stitches. With his entire family in the front row, Sedaris shared childhood anecdotes as well as a detailed description of a boil on his bottom. Adding a personal touch to the event, Sedaris even read from his diary which showed his attention to the peculiarity of everyday life. His father, Lou, told the audience, "Obviously he is given to excess and I hope the readers understand half of what he says can't be true. I think he's a super writer."

sponsored by National Panhellenic Council

MCs Haleemah Nash and William Durrah pumped up audiences for the homecoming step show, which featured an exhibition by Lambda Pi Chi Sorority, Inc. and competitive performances by Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Inc., Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc., Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., and Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, Inc. With their hardcore yet profound performance, the Deltas' step team beat out the old school charm of last year's champions, Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Inc. However, the schoolboy theme and Sigma sticks proved successful for the gentlemen of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc. when they took first place over the Alphas' train and the Kappas' kanes.

This year marked the first Duke/UNC Battle of the Bands, which was held on Main West and coincided with the football game against UNC. The bands were required to consist of only undergraduates and were judged by representatives from local venues, recording studios and writers from The Independent. The nine bands ranged from rock to jazz but Duke's Pulsar Trio walked away with the $500 cash prize, a gig at the Lincoln Theater in Raleigh ,and a professional recording session.

Wendell

The characters of Charlie Brown, his sister Sally, Schroeder, Linus, Linus's sister Lucy, and Snoopy came to life in this Wendell production, directed by sophomore Mike Ayers. With vibrant costumes and a stunning set design lifted straight off the pages of Charles M. Schulz's comic strip, the intimate theater surroundings drew audiences into the world of the beloved illustrations. The funny and enchanting musical numbers furthered the show's child-like plots, which carries mature life lessons.

sponsored by Duke University Union

Oktoberfest, the annual beloved Duke version of the famed Munich festival, had all its classic elements: vendors, live entertainment, inflatable toys and food. This year, however, Oktoberfest had a new very popular feature: beer on food points. Along with the new beverage plan came headliner Kenin, a Washington D.C. band featuring two recent Duke graduates. The master of ceremonies for the day's performances was Southern belle Cameran, best known from MTV's The Real World: San Diego.

how to succeed in business without really trying

Hoof and Horn

A young window-cleaner named Finch is determined to climb the corporate ladder by following the rules in a book, "How to Succeed in Business." To fulfill the book's first rule of getting a job in a large firm, Finch secures a place in the mailroom of World Wide Wickets. When head of the mailroom Mr. Twimble gets promoted, he nominates Finch to take his place. Finch, wary of the book's second rule of ascending beyond the mailroom, declines Twimble's job and explains his move as being "for the sake of the team." The higher-ups, including the company's president J.B. Biggley take notice of Finch's gesture, which then launches Finch in whirlwind of continual promotions, love triangles, and success.

sponsored by Diya

Diya dazzled crowds with a 3-hour extravaganza showcasing South Asian culture. True to the "Bollywood Idol" theme, over a hundred performers made this year's Awaaz the biggest and most extravagant two-night special yet. Along with traditional favorites, audiences saw more fusion acts such as hip-hop piece "Rhythm and Roots," featuring a rap intro by Haleemah Nash. Students took the stage in upbeat Bollywood movie portrayals, hauntingly beautiful hymns, powerful spoken word acts, impressive solos, spirited Raas, and energetic Bhangra, danceslam revolution

Dance Slam

DanceSlam's year-end performance offered group members a chance to exhibit original choreography and demonstrate their passion for dance. Two male dancers joined the typically all-female ensemble for the first time in the group's history. Dancers graced the stage in ballet, hip-hop, lyrical, jazz, swing, and modern pieces. "Higher Ground" resurrected 80's style dancing while "Desert Rose" embraced modernity. Jazz compositions included "When Doves Cry" and the saucy "Cell Block Tango" from the musical "Chicago."

With a distinctive twist on Southern rhythm, the highly aclaimed Grammy nominees-blew the roof off Duke in their 2 hour show.

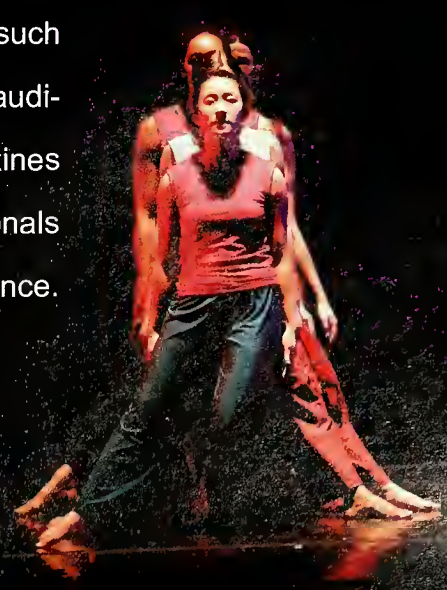
sponsored by Major Speakers

Living a turbulent life, Angela Davis has gone through segregated schools and was even once named the FBI's "most wanted criminal" after being accused of helping a prisoner killed in an escape attempt with a gun. Influenced by her mother who was a civil rights campaigner and a member of the NAACP, Davis has spent much of her career exposing racism that is endemic to the US prison system and exploring new ways to de-construct oppression and race hatred. Speaking about her opinions on the prison conditions and current political situations in the world, she received loud applause from the audience in Page.

november dances

Duke University Dance Department

With its national reputation as a major center of dance in the United States, Duke University is host to the annual American Dance Festival. With such repute behind them, performers did not disappoint the Reynolds Theatre audience during the annual November Dances. Featuring a gamut of routines from ballet to cultural dances performed by Duke Students and professionals alike, November Dances provided a beautiful and enriching weekend of dance.



lunar new year

sponsored by Asian Students Association

Starting as a small celebration in Von Canon, the Lunar New Year festival grew to fill Baldwin Auditorium in 2000 and finally Page Auditorium in 2001. Duke University's 13th annual Lunar New Year Festival celebrated the year of the flamboyant, charismatic, and witty Rooster (somtimes known as a Chanticleer) with a program that featured over 150 student performers in 17 traditional and modern acts of music, dance, fashion, politics, and martial arts. This year's festival took the theme of Vision to convey a message of imagination, optimism, and unity and to celebrate the value of our personal visions for ourselves.

sponsored by Hoof and Horn

When he can't bring himself to kill his baby boy, a scientist abandons his half-human, half-bat son to the wilderness. Eventually, three teenagers stumble upon the bat boy, who is all grown up and living in a cave. The teenagers take the bat boy to the town vet, Dr. Thomas Parker. To the chagrin of local townsfolk, the vet's wife saves the boy from destruction and affectionately names him Edgar. A romance soon blossoms between Edgar and the vet's daughter Shelley. There is no happy ending in this hilarious musical based on a National Enquirer story however as despite all his efforts at becoming normal ,Edgar finally realizes that there is no room in a small town for a boy spawned by a bat.

sponsored by Major Speakers and ASA

The acclaimed author of the Joy Luck Club, winner of the National Book Award and the L.A. Times Book Award in 1989, Amy Tan entertained and spoke about her life in Page Auditorium with witty remarks and solemnity. Along with speaking about her life and correcting the Cliffnotes she had, she also spoke about the illness that has struck her family and how the trip to China after her mother's recovery provided a revelation for her. Afterwards, a question and answer session was held followed by a book signing for the many people who waited.

With readings and talks given by the world famous poet Adrienne Riche, novelist and Oprah guest Sherman Alexie, and Duke's own Allen Gurganis, the annual Blackburn Literary Festival lived up to it's reputation as the foremost literary festival in the South. In the middle of the events, the Gothic Reading Room even served as host to a night of poetry written and read by Duke Students and professors hosted by Duke's literary magazine The Archive.

sponsored by Duke University Union

A night of excitement and mystery awaited those who attended the annual Devil's Eve celebration. With thrilling and gut churning carnival rides and numerous food vendors, Duke Students and their families were treated to an all night party on main quad during Parent's Weekend. As one of Duke's most popular and fun-filled nights, surprises could be found all throughout campus during the celebration as students let loose with a variety of activities from trick or treating to bungee jumping to even learning how to breathe fire.

angels in america

Duke Players

To cap off an incredible year of theatre at Duke, the Duke Players took on one of the most important and challenging pieces of American theatre in the past thirty years, the first part of Tony Kushner's Pulitzer Prize winning play Angels in America. Directed by Professor Jeff Storer, all five performances of this "Gay Phantasmagoria on National Themes." sold-out as the play received five stars from the Independent. With a cast and crew of students and professors, Angels in America challenged its audiences with questions concerning AIDS and identity in modern America.

degrees of separation

Dance Black

Like all of Dance Black's shows in recent years, Degrees of Separation entertained a full house in Page Auditorium. Dance Black promotes the expression of African American culture and diversity through many different dance styles, including ballet, jazz, African, modern, and spiritual based techniques. The upbeat and lively choreography captivated the audience with music ranging from all sides of the spectrum, from Janet Jackson to Britney Spears.

Defining Movement

The third annual Defining Movement was no less shocking, sexy, and poignant than preceding performances. Reflecting their philosophy of diversity and multiculturalism, defMo dancers presented an eclectic mix, including hip-hop, jazz, and cultural dances. The battle of the sexes played out in a high energy, You Got Served medley of "Ante Up" and "Flipside." Defining Movement's first ever all-male dance featured smooth playboys shotgunning to Usher's "My Way." Not to be outdone by the guys, the ladies shook their stuff for sexual independence to the spicy latin-infused song, "In These Shoes," but defMo returned to innocence and the era of Frank Sinatra in a classic partner dance, "Luck Be a Lady."

sponsored by Mi Gente

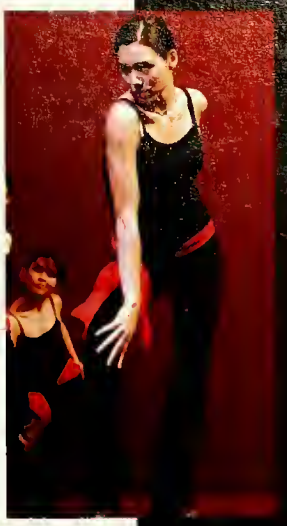
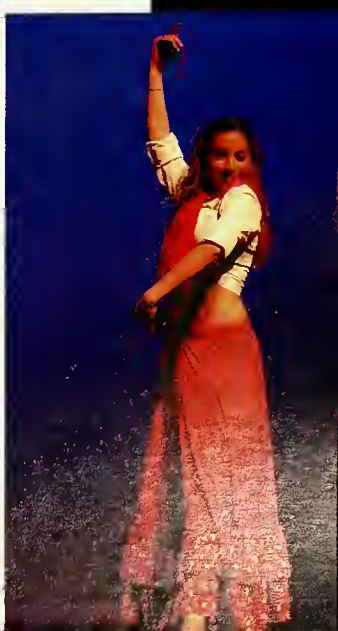
The third annual Latino cultural show entitled 'Ascension' kicked off the night with a mariachi band. The show kept going with traditional dances, singing, spoken word, and much more music. It was a showcase of the immense talents of Latino undergraduates at Duke. This year's show even moved beyond Duke and into the Triangle Area as students from UNC-Chapel Hill took part and attended the performance. Featuring a mix of traditional music and dance with more modern interpretations and collaborations the show had high energy and received tremendous enthusiasm from the capacity crowd.



¡ritmo! amor y pasión

Sabrosura

Their t-shirts say it all: "So hot it hurts." Never before has a performance group oozed so much sexual energy with so much style. In their second annual showcase, Sabrosura presented an eclectic collection of Latin-inspired pieces and avant-garde collaborations with the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc. step team and Chinese Folk Dance. From fiery Argentine Tango to revitalizing hip-hop, stimulating swing/jive to rhythmic step, lively Cha Cha to traditional Chinese choreography, and seductive Salsa beats to a Klub Scene homage to Napoleon Dynamite, Sabrosura impressed audiences with the many facets of Latin dance.



into the woods

Hoof 'n' Horn

Classic fairytale figures come together in this comical yet meaningful musical, directed by Maura Fauver. When the Baker and his wife want to have a child, they discover that a neighboring witch has cast a spell on the Baker's family. In order to break the spell, the couple ventures into the woods for a scavenger hunt that features fabled characters such as Little Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, and Rapunzel. At the conclusion of the play's first half, the characters resolve their individual storylines, but their happy endings are spoiled by adulterous princes and grim tragedies in the second act. The story takes a serious turn when the characters must learn to work together to survive the fury of a giant's vengeful widow.

d.u.i. big show

Duke University Improv

This year's Big Show by Duke's much loved comedy troupe, DUI who has raised 80,000 dollars for charity since beginning in 1996 opened with a take-off of the hit TV show "24," in which President Brodhead was kidnapped was followed by numerous other hilarious spoofs on poker tournaments and pop msuic. Other skits included an ad for the board game Jew-manji and a contemplation of what would happen if God matriculated as a Duke freshman. Along with classic acts such as Party Quirks, the evening presented thriving first attempts at song and dance in two original musical numbers.

last day of classes

sponsored by Campus Council and Duke University Union

With the world-famous alternative rock band Collective Soul, best known for their hit song, "Shine" and eight other #1 songs, rocking the quad, the 2005 Last Day of Classes provided an electrifying end to a great year. While some students were initially disappointed with the choice of bands, all doubts skepticism washed away once when Collective Soul and opener Weekend Excursion took the stage. With perfect weather, Collective Soul's tremendous stage appeal, and a day long festival featuring 6 student bands on a side stage, the Last Day of Classes gave students once last chance to party before hitting the books for finals.

With another impressive season, the national semi-finalist Blue Devils picked up their best record since 1999 going 18-6. The Devils were highly ranked much of the year and made a strong run for the national championship as they entered the College Cup for the fifth time under coach John Rennie before losing in the final four to the Gauchos of UC Santa Barbara. Numerous Devils won national honors including a Third Team All-America selection for Blake Camp and Michael Videira being named National Freshman of The Year.

Women's Soccer

By racking up 15 victories with just 8 losses, the Duke Women's Soccer team had an incredible year which saw them ranked as high as 9th in the nation and led to an appearance in the Sweet 16 where they lost to a strong UCLA team 2-0. The season was full of team and individual accomplishment highlighted by Senior Casey McClucksey being named to the Second Team All-America.

The season featured many highlights including the fifth ranked Ludovic Walter appearing in the NCAA Singles Championship.

Women's Tennis

In a season marked by injuries and frustration, the Women's Tennis team still posted an impressive season. Unfortunately, after losing 4-0 to arch-rival North Carolina in the second round of the NCAA tournament, the Blue Devils found themselves in the unfamiliar position of not playing in the Sweet Sixteen for the first time since 1990. Injuries plagued the team for much of the year after losing their No. 1 senior Katie Blaszak and starter Julia Smith.

Golf
National Champions

In a banner year for the Duke Golf program, both the men's and the women's teams had their most successful seasons in school history. The women's team became national champions for the third time while the men's team finished ranked 5th in the nation. Coaches for both teams, Dan Brooks and Rod Myers received National Coach of the Year honors while three women, Anne Grzebien, Liz Janangelo and Brittany Land, and one man, Ryan Blaum earned First Team All-America Honors.

Campus Life

East Campus

The Duke experience starts on East Campus, the home of every first year student. Here nothing is more important than dorm pride. Friendships are formed in halls that may last a lifetime. There are many things that characterize East Campus but none are more infamous than the daily meals at the Marketplace. While some love the buffet style feasts, others can't stand the greasy pizza and this fixture of first-year life.

During their first days on campus, the newly arrived class of 2008 enjoyed the numerous events of orientation week including the Activities Fair where all of Duke's student clubs, organizations, publications and sports teams recruit the new underclassmen.

There isn't much at Duke that compares to the rivalry between the freshmen dorms. To prove whose dorm is the best, freshmen take part in Dorm Wars- a daylong event where dorms compete in various activities from relay races to the tug-of-war.

West Campus

Any undergraduate will tell you that the heart of Duke University is West Campus. It's not only where most students live and take classes but in the very center of West Campus is the icon of the university- the towering Duke Chapel. It is here in the Duke Chapel that students come as freshmen for their convocation and it's here that just before graduating, students return for their baccalaureate. West Campus is indeed the heart of the university and the home to every Blue Devil at one time or another.

Most students would agree that the food on West Campus is much better than what's offered on East Campus in the Marketplace. On West, you can get everything from a hot dog at Pauly Dogs to a burrito at the Armadillo Grill. Just watch out for the morning rush at Alpine for a bagel

Greek Life

For some, joining a fraternity or sorority is a tough decision. For others, it's a no-brainer. Since almost a majority of students end up 'going greek' at Duke, fraternity and sorority life plays a huge role for the social atmosphere on campus. While many of the stigmas attached to Greek life apply at Duke, fraternities and sororities provide many of their members with a tight knit community of friends with whom special bonds are made.

While parties in fraternity sections remained popular this year, with the University's crack down on on-campus frat-parties many late night revelries moved to the houses just off East campus outside of the University officials' control.

Pledging is a contentious issue between Greeks and the administration At any university. In the end though, pledging at Duke is a way of bringing together new pledge classes and having some fun.

While fraternities and sororities are often most known for their parties, Greeks at Duke show a serious side when it comes to their studies. Every fraternity and sorority places high importance on academic excellence.

Fraternities are known to be active on campus in many ways from community service to mixers with sororities. When it comes down to it though, fraternity life at Duke is about friendship and making college as enjoyable as possible.

Unlike fraternities, sororities at Duke don't have living space in dorms provided by the university. While this alters the Greek experience between guys and girls at Duke, it doesn't lessen what a sorority means to its members. There still exist the close friendships, the fun, and an enriched college experience.

Class of 2005

Three weeks after arriving on campus for the first time, the Class of 2005 found their world turned upside down with the events of September 11. As a reuslt of to this harrowing beginning and the events to follow, their journey was often tougher and more confusing than most othersas classes before them as they witnessed dramatic changes occur in not only their own lives but in the world around them. They saw through these turbulent times with strength and four years later, they sat on the field of Wallace Wade Stadium for their commencement just like the 154 classes before them.

On the damp morning of Sunday, May 15, 2005, Duke University conferred 1,450 degrees to undergraduates in a ceremony that featured a commencement address by the President of Chile and Duke Alumni, Ricardo Lagos. President Lagos' address was preceded by the student address from Rob Painter who humorously told of his business plan to make and sell miniature figurines of the James B. Duke statue to all graduating seniors.

When asked to describe Road in Sight, we answer that the overall character of the works in this exhibition are unpretentious, critical, raw, and bold. We chose artists who are engaged with culture at large, who look beyond their own subjectivities to consider broad social, environmental, and political issues in an era when identity politics dominates contemporary artists' practices.

We have passed without a trace through the mind of Duke, without a trace but $160,000 each, deposited in the accounts. Our professors will forget; our friends will forget. Our rooms will be vacuumed out and occupied by strangers. Our DukeCards will cease to function. One by one we are all becoming shades.

Do not put off living the kind of life you meant to live. There is no time for that, no matter how much time is left. Go ahead and make the decision, write the letter, get the help you need, find someone to love, give yourself away. Live prepared. Live a caught up life not a put-off life, so that wherever you are... standing in a field or grinding at the mill, or just going about the everyday business of life... you are ready for God, for whatever happens next, not afraid but wide awake, watching for the Lord who never tires of coming to the world.

DUKE

After giving fans a scare during the summer by almost becoming head coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, Coach K gave Duke one of it's most memorable basketball seasons in which he recorded his 700th win as a head coach

In four years as a student at Duke, one hears much about the 'Duke experience.' While brochures given to prospective students try to define it, no one ever gets the definition right. It's not something that can be captured in words or photographs. It is something that can only be understood through experience. While words and photographs can jog memories of such experience, they can never awaken memories that were never there. The making of memories is up to the individual and it is making the most out of one's experience that matters most in the end.

And by the way....

It's June 1 and I graduated two weeks ago. I have two hours until my flight leaves and just minutes until I switch off the lights, lock the door and hit the troublesome alarm of 01 Flowers for the last time. Four years I've spent in this office gathering equipment, looking at photos, going to meetings, designing, sleeping, taking assignments etc and in those four years I have witnessed the amazing yet steady decline of this office. The carpet is torn, the ceiling has caved in at least 5 times since I've been here, the room has flooded twice, the phone lines and network rarely work, one cabinet and two drawers we can't even pry open, the alarm malfunctions regularly, I swear the room has shrunk and don't even get me started on what happened to the darkroom last summer. Yet somehow, with all that seems wrong with this dilapidated and dank basement of an office, as it has declined, the actual book has only improved. I took it as a sign of great things to come then when, upon returning to the office for the first time as editor last August, I was welcomed by the overpowering stench of mildew and a missing darkroom ceiling! A few sponges and a couple of bottles of grapefruit scented Lysol later, the 93rd Chanticleer was ready for business.

It's been a year of firsts for the Chanticleer and similarly it's been a year of some extraordinary challenges and changes as well- but thanks to a wonderful and committed staff, I think this year's book is something we all can be immensely proud of. That's really the purpose for this short and probably largely unread blurb- to thank those who deserve thanks the most- that small percentage of the Duke population for whom this book means something more than just 336 pages of colorful ink-soaked 100lb paper- the Chanticleer Staff. I enjoyed working with all of you this past year and most of all I loved getting to know you all. I hope you're as proud for having been part of this yearbook as I am. Most of all- thanks for listening to me ramble week in and week out about just how much was going wrong with the book, the office, the world- it really was a sign of how happy I was with how things were turning out. Now, as I leave the Chanticleer in wonderful and definitely more capable hands, I also leave the office in much worse shape than when I found it, in the hopes that it means the Chanticleer will continue improving steadily.
